

Jessica, Sam, and the Beach
by
Mickey Bolmer

Jessica and Sam met on the beach
(Pictures show parallel play.)
They loved the sand, the water, and the sky.
When their families packed the cars to go home,
Jessica said, "Good-bye Sam!"
Sam said, "Eh, Eh, Eh!"
Back at day care,
Sam thought of Jessica and the beach.
Helping her father make a Halloween cake,
Jessica thought of Sam and the beach.
In December, Jessica convinced her father to call Sam.
"Sam, I miss you," said Jessica
"Eh! Sand! Water! Kite!" said Sam.
In February, flying down a snowy hill,
Sam shouted, "Jessica!"
Jessica made a Snow-Sam.
The days grew longer as the months,
March, April, May, and June passed.
And finally it was once again July
and time to go to the beach!
"Jessica!" Sam shouted, smiling, running.
"Sam, Sam, Sam!" Jessica laughed, hugging.
They took to the beach like dolphins regaining the open sea.
And this year, Jessica and Sam
loved the sand, the water, and the sky,
together.
After their week had flown by,
they helped to pack the cars,
and then they said,
"Good-bye, Sam. I love you!"
"Good-bye, Jessica, I love you!"
And together,
"Next summer....the beach!"
